International Workshop on Policy Theories in Europe

Revisiting Policy Process Theories and Their Relevance for Europe

This two-day workshop welcomes top scholars from nine different European and North American universities to debate about the application of policy theories in Europe as regards their current state of application and potential revisions.

Are you an early-career researcher or student of public policy willing to engage in discussions with established international public policy researchers? Are you a public policy researcher interested in exchanging and networking with international scholars? Do you want to hear about latest research on policy theories in Europe? Then register for free – participation is possible on-site or online.

The workshop serves to prepare a special issue in the international journal European Policy Analysis (EPA), for which the invited researchers will present their current work on the topic and engage in fruitful discussions and networking from which you can benefit.

Participants at all career levels (students, early-career, experienced) are invited to discuss, give feedback, and ask questions following the presentations of the workshop and in the open panel discussions.
